Charlotte artist Andrew Linton has been creating extraordinary pottery for over 25 years. The award-winning East Carolina University graduate earned BFA degrees in both Art Education/Ceramics and Painting. Linton has been teaching pottery classes and workshops at his studio, Pottery Central, for over ten years. "I am in a great position at my pottery school to be constantly inspired and challenged by my students," he says. His current pursuits include copper flash raku, high fire reduction copper reds, carving and slip painting, animal and figurative imagery, and many alternative firing techniques.

Pottery Central is located at 4823 Monroe Road in Charlotte. For more information visit potterycentral.com or call 704.307.7557.

Pottery Central holds classes for potters of all ages. Check out their website for information and class schedule. Sign up now and learn to express yourself in 3D using your hands, skills and imagination.
